ENGINEERS WITHOUT BORDERS – SAN FRANCISCO PROFESSIONALS ANNOUNCES SELECTION FOR HOSTING THE 2010 EWB WEST COAST REGIONAL CONFERENCE BY ENGINEERS WITHOUT BORDERS – USA

San Francisco, California June 20, 2010, Engineers Without Borders – San Francisco Professionals (EWB-SFP) announces its selection to host the 2010 EWB West Coast Regional Conference by Engineers Without Borders – USA (EWB-USA). “We are honored to be selected to host this prestigious event,” states Johnny Fu, President of EWB-SFP.

The goal of this annual regional conference is to provide training to west coast EWB chapters and projects teams on a variety of technical and non-technical subjects, such as how to effectively test water in water developing countries, how to perform a community health survey, and how to facilitate effective project communication. The event provides a great forum for students and professionals from various disciplines to network with others on the West Coast interested in sustainable international development

The conference will include speakers from other EWB chapters and professionals from sustainable engineering focused non-profits. It will be filled with hands-on training workshops that are relevant, thought provoking, and educational. This conference will bring together EWB members, businesses, corporations, universities, trade associations, and other non-profit groups to connect on current and other important topics. There will also be a career fair, with over twenty professional companies showcasing their work, which will bring globally minded employers, and EWB members together to network with one another.

This is the only event of its type that caters to socially conscious individuals and organizations looking to positively connect sustainable development and the evolving field of engineering. It is a chance to meet with companies and other NGOs that present opportunities through idea sharing, insight, and proven practices for creating and sharing a new era of global development and education. “The EWB West Coast Regional Conference is a great place to meet like minded people who want to make a difference one community at a time”.
